

Ancient Times Before the Romans

Many peoples invaded Britain in prehistoric times. As prehistory is the story of man before written records began, there are only some remains, some of them very impressive, to testify to the customs and civilization of these peoples.

Stonehenge is the most important and famous archeological site in Britain. This monument was probably built between 3000 and 1500 BC on Salisbury Plain. It consists of a ring of massive blocks of stone up to 4 meters high inside a wide circular earthwork.

Nobody knows for sure if Stonehenge was a burial-ground, a temple for the adoration of the sun or a place from which stars and planets were observed. An ancient legend said that Merlin, the wizard, got extremely angry at the view of some giants dancing, and changed them into the huge stones of Stonehenge.

The Celts came from Central Europe and in the 5th century they settled in Britain where they built a prosperous civilization.

They were organized in villages under the rule of priests called Druids, and lived on farming and hunting.
